Uses for dog training play pens

The mere suggestion of placing a dog in a crate/training play pen may raise concerns about restricting its freedom. However, professionals, including trainers and vets, advocate for crating due to the positive impact on the dogs well-being. They serve multiple purposes, such as providing safe confinement during travel or around the home when supervision is not possible.

Crate training your dog

Dogs who are crate trained feel at ease knowing they have a safe, secure den-like space of their own. The crate/play pen provides a calm, controlled environment which in turn helps the dog to feel less stressed or anxious and for this reason it should never be used as a punishment.

Familiarising your dog with a crate at home may also contribute to a smoother travel experience as the dog finds comfort and security in a known environment.

Training aid

Can help train puppies to cope with separation anxiety and toilet training.

Short-term confinement

Play pens are handy around the home when you are busy or unable to supervise your dog for short spells of time. You can be assured that your dog is safely confined to their play pen while you're unable to keep an eye on them.

Vet advised

In some instances veterinarians may advise the use of crates and play pens for dogs that require convalescence due to illness or surgery to aid in their recovery.

Whelping pens

Whelping pens are designed with high sides to prevent puppies from crawling out and putting themselves at risk. A whelping box, an enclosed space intended for privacy, comfort, and safety, serves as an ideal environment during the "nesting" period.

Often, the mother dog will give birth within the whelping box, ensuring a secure and controlled setting for the birthing process.

Guidance

This guide will help you choose the right size of training play pen for your dog. When choosing you must bare in mind the size considerations based on the breed of your dog whilst also allowing enough room to make the pen comfortable and providing enough space for the dog to stand and turn around.

How to determine the ideal size training play pen for your dog:

1. Look at the overall size of your dog rather than just its weight, as this may vary in different breeds.
2. Ensure the pen is at least 15cm longer than the dog's body length and 15cm higher than their shoulder height for comfort and movement.
3. Consider a pen that accommodates the dog's adult size, ensuring long-term use and avoiding the need for a transition from a favourite den.

Pretty Pooch Dog Training Play Pens come in four sizes:

Small, Medium, Large and X Large.

See opposite for our size recommendations for each size of pen by breed.*

*These are our general breed size recommendations. When selecting your pen speak to your breeder (new Pup) or measure your dog to find out what pen size they think will be most suitable using the guidelines above.
